

Bacanal De Adolescentes is a Spanish language, feature-length film made in 1982. Written by Eduardo Mestres, the film was directed by Santiago Álvarez. Wikipedia has more information on this subject. The Cuban Bacanal de Adolescentes is an intense portrait of the uninhibited lives of teenagers in Havana in 1981, at the height of Fidel Castro's power and just before his decision to allow free trade zones with other countries. The director catches them partying in discos, sharing their dreams for love and happiness, posing for fashion spreads in magazines that are sold only on the black market in Cuba - suddenly interrupted by Castro's announcement on television that he would now allow some restricted private enterprise.
